City of Newsmen

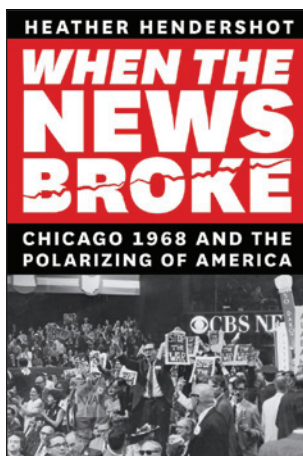

Public Lies and Professional Secrets in Cold War Washington

Kathryn J. McGarr

“With crisp, fluent prose and an eye for telling detail and quotations, McGarr tells an engrossing story of the Washington press during a critical time in world affairs. She sets up her tale with vivid portraits of the early capital, the evolution of the gentlemen’s club of foreign correspondents, and their close but contentious relations with US officials through the early Cold War. McGarr’s archival work has netted a wealth of revealing vignettes and quotations, smoothly woven together in her crisp writing.”—Robert Weisbrot, coauthor of The Liberal Hour: Washington and the Politics of Change during the 1960s

When the News Broke

Chicago 1968 and the Polarizing of America

Heather Hendershot

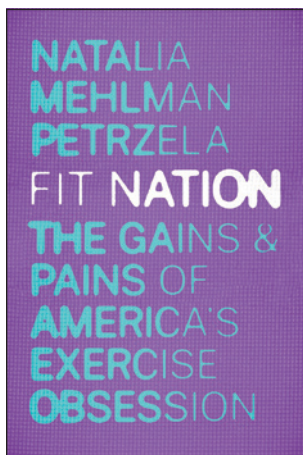

A riveting, blow-by-blow account of how the network broadcasts of the 1968 Democratic convention shattered faith in American media.

“In When the News Broke, Hendershot marshals a deeply researched argument for how four turbulent days planted the seeds of public distrust in media that are still bearing bitter fruit. It is a fascinating look back at a dramatic American summer on which the sun has still not set.”

Fit Nation

The Gains and Pains of America’s Exercise Obsession

Natalia Mehlman Petrzela

“Petrzela has brought us an intellectually rich and delightfully informative history of how people in the United States have understood, obsessed over, and changed their bodies. In a thorough look at the trends, characters, and ideologies that have informed the body politic and the politics of bodies, Petrzela helps us recognize the weight of constant messaging from industries trying to convince the public to seek perfection endlessly. An important and enjoyable read.”—Marcia Chatelain, author of Pulitzer Prize-winning Franchise: The Golden Arches in Black America

Everyone against Us

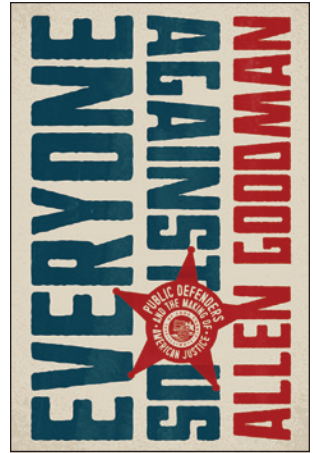

Public Defenders and the Making of American Justice
Allen Goodman

“In Everyone against Us, Goodman offers a behind-the-scenes look at what it’s like to be a public defender in one of the nation’s largest criminal court systems. The result is a gripping and often heartbreaking memoir about one lawyer’s journey to find meaning and justice despite the odds against him.”—Kevin Davis, author of Defending the Damned: Inside a Dark Corner of the Criminal Justice System

The Cult of Creativity

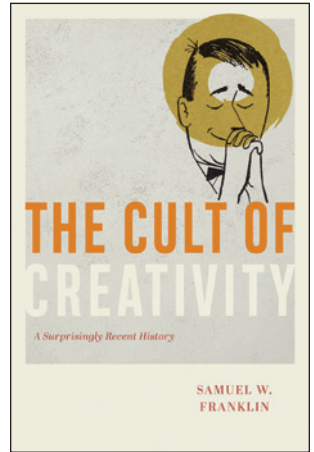

A Surprisingly Recent History
Samuel W. Franklin

“The Cult of Creativity is a beautifully written and well-documented account of how creativity gained the societal value it has today. Franklin reveals the powerful social construction at work behind the meaning of creativity and reminds us that such ideas have historical roots, as well as a more sinister side that should concern us all. Through engaging storylines, he builds a complex picture that is captivating to discover, piece by piece.”

Every Goddamn Day

A Highly Selective, Definitely Opinionated, and Alternatingly Humorous and Heartbreaking Historical Tour of Chicago
Neil Steinberg

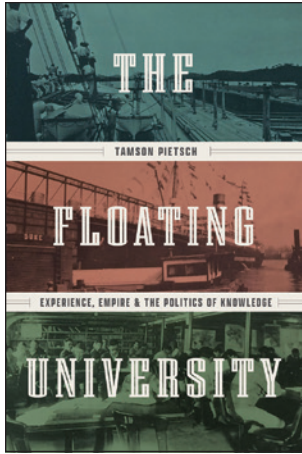

A daily celebration of Chicago’s history, both known and obscure, and always entertaining.

“[Steinberg] creates a moving, living picture of Chicago’s past. . . . here is Chicago in hundreds of glittering facets, with stories of art, theater, industry, racism, injustice, and sheer goofiness. . . . Witty, economical and often whimsical, he lends color and freshness to each event.”—New City

The Floating University

Experience, Empire, and the Politics of Knowledge
Tamson Pietsch

The Floating University sheds light on a story of optimism and imperialist ambition in the 1920s.

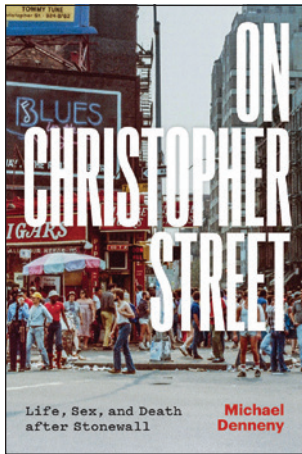

“With its expert writing and construction, The Floating University is both a pleasure to read and a model of how to connect cultural and imperial histories. Pietsch paints a lively portrait of elite American thinking about knowledge and world affairs in the Jazz Age.”

On Christopher Street

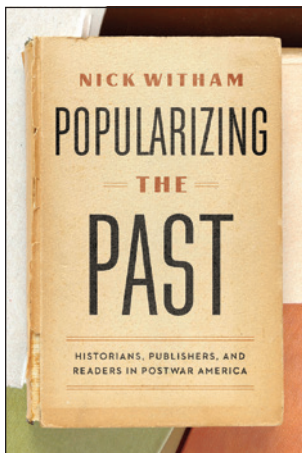

Life, Sex, and Death after Stonewall
Michael Denny

“Because of his pivotal role in creating modern gay literature, Denny has perhaps done more than any other single individual to actually create contemporary gay literary culture. On Christopher Street shows that there was a first-rate intellect behind his more familiar role as publisher and editor. While this volume is an important window on the recent past, it also demonstrates the extent to which one man’s lively and humane intellect influenced the creation of contemporary gay culture.”

Popularizing the Past

Historians, Publishers, and Readers in Postwar America
Nick Witham

“Drawing on careful research and writing in sparkling prose that rivals his subjects’, Witham examines how five prominent postwar historians navigated the challenges and rewards of scripting national narratives for audiences beyond the academy. For anyone interested in crafting intellectually robust, readable, and relevant scholarship, Popularizing the Past is essential reading.”

Beauty and the Brain

The Science of Human Nature in Early America

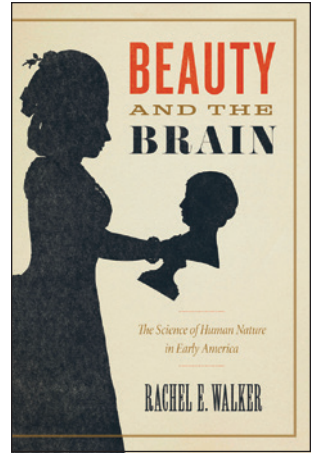

Rachel E. Walker

“In this lively new study of physiognomy and phrenology, Walker demonstrates how an elitist, Enlightenment ‘science of man’ was reshaped by people on the margins—women, African Americans, and a range of social reformers—to demand broader inclusiveness in the new republic. Beauty and the Brain offers a timely and persuasive reexamination of how equality and inequality form the warp and woof of American popular culture.”

The Great American Transit Disaster

A Century of Austerity, Auto-Centric Planning, and White Flight

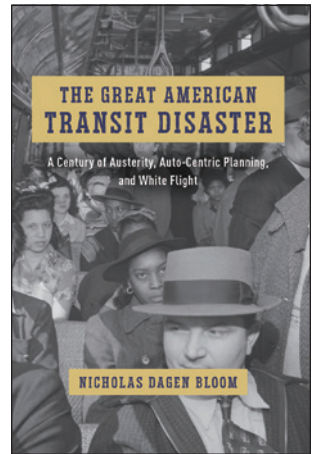

Nicholas Dagen Bloom

“In this cogent and deeply researched book, [Bloom] seeks to explain why leaders in cities such as Atlanta, Detroit, and Chicago chose to invest in highways and airways rather than mass transit. Bloom, wisely and perceptively, avoids discredited anti-bus and anti-streetcar ideas, focusing instead on pay-as-you-go transit, auto-centric planning, and white flight. Nick Bloom, as always, is readable, assignable, and compelling.”—Mark H. Rose, coauthor of A Good Place to Do Business: The Politics of Downtown Renewal since 1945

Fascism Comes to America

A Century of Obsession in Politics and Culture

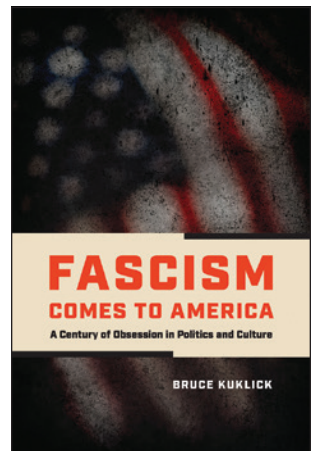

Bruce Kuklick

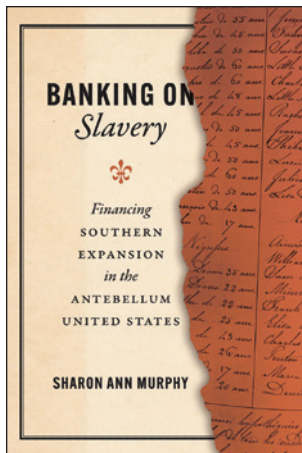

“The book is as much about Hollywood as it is about a movement or ideology. Mr. Kuklick, an accomplished historian of ideas, turns his skills to Hollywood’s treatment of fascism. He explains why American entertainers, intellectuals, and others have so often resorted to the term ‘fascism’ to denounce things they don’t like: FDR’s New Deal, the Reagan Revolution and much else. He surmises that Americans’ obsession with fascism is the flip side of a collective inability to reckon with the calamitous gap between the Founders and contemporary America.”

Banking on Slavery

Financing Southern Expansion in the Antebellum United States

Sharon Ann Murphy

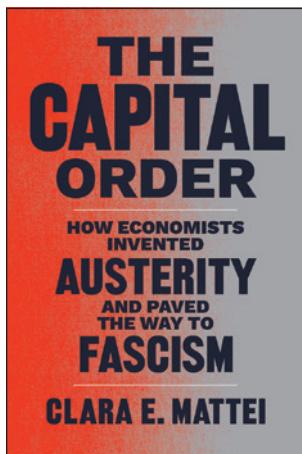

“In a pathbreaking account of the way Americans financed slavery, Murphy connects the vast sweep of that tragedy to the banking that made it possible. Detail by dollar detail, she exposes the structures that transmuted enslaved people into assets and collateral, building white wealth all the while. A powerful—and chilling—book.”

Uncertain Climes

Debating Climate Change in Gilded Age America
Joseph Giacomelli

“Uncertain Climes offers a necessary corrective and a significant historiographical contribution that will change how we think about Gilded Age science and environmental history. The genius of Giacomelli’s book is that it embraces the complexity and messiness of the past, challenging the conventional stories historians tell about late-nineteenth-century environmental thought and science.”—Adam Wesley Dean, author of An Agrarian Republic: Farming, Antislavery Politics, and Nature Parks in the Civil War Era
